

METHOD OF IDENTIFYING DESIGNABLE PROTEIN BACKBONE CONFIGURATIONS

The invention provides a method for identifying new designable protein backbone configurations. The method includes the steps of:

- (a) specifying a fixed number of secondary structural elements having a set of dihedral angle pairs (b) generating a set of stacks comprising said secondary structural elements; and (c) evaluating designability of said stacks.